Blogger WordPress Wikipedia flickr skype
You Tube twitter myspace facebook
Linked in

BeautyCollaboration

It takes a different breed of online community to do business

MySpace, Face book, LinkedIn have million of members, it is great but the chance that you will do business in these communities is remote.

There are many ways to use social websites for business networking. The critical issue is finding a community that is a good fit for your business. If you are a member of the beauty industry this is without a doubt your online community. We will work together to fight the economic crisis. Together we will break old patterns and boost our own industry business.

Finally A sophisticated weapon in the war against recession. If doing more with less money is your motto BeautyCollaboration is definitely your place to be.

Grow your market, get business leads, build an international network of business contacts, enable your team to do more with less, maximize awareness, improve customer loyalty, Increase sales, enable channel partners, build better products. The platform includes a digital marketing system, discussion forums, bulletin boards, classified ads, industry directory, archives, innovation mall, a project management engine and a B2B commerce platform.

http://www.beautycollaboration.org

BC is not associated with the companies above mentioned they are cited as an example of the online community landscape .